Colombia's Displacement Crisis

Marino Cordoba who was forced to leave the jungles of his native Colombia in the face of death threats.

César Omar Silva Rosales, a journalist and member of the Honduran resistance movement, will tell you about narrowly escaping with his life from Honduras after speaking out in the wake of the June 2009 coup. For full article click here

Nicaraguan Families Separated by the Free Trade Storm Claudia Chomorro, recently unemployed, confronts the challenges of survival in Nicaragua and considers leaving her country for a chance at survival in another land.

Residents of small town Paso de la Reina in Mexico are determined to stop the construction of a massive hydroelectric dam that could wipe out their entire community. For full article click here

What is our relationship with Claudia, Cesar, folks from Paso de la Reina, Marino and about 5 million other Colombians who have been forced to abandon their homes, families, communities and land for a chance at survival? The common thread is the connection between their displacement and U.S. policies. And we can do something about that.
